Journaling

<https://campus.barracuda.com/doc/42048360/>

Microsoft Exchange Server journaling allows you to record a copy of, or journal, email communications in your organization and send them to a dedicated mailbox on an Exchange Server. Envelope journaling has a significant advantage to standard, message-only, journaling as it records data about all recipients of a message. For example, members of a distribution list may change over time. Envelope journaling records all individual recipients, not just the specific distribution list. Envelope journaling also captures Bcc recipients.
