NEW THIS MONTH

Like Sunscreen from Scammers

Applying sunscreen once at the beginning of summer to protect you all season long is like running one SAT phishing simulation and calling your organization 'cyber safe.' Like the harmful rays of the sun, cyber criminals are also unrelenting. So, make regular training—even during Summer—part of a long-range information security strategy. Like sunscreen, it can help prevent you and your organization from getting burned.

New Email Protection Plugin Available

Take suspicious email reporting to new heights with our new Outlook plugin! With the touch of a button, users can:

- Report legitimate or simulated phishing emails from campaigns
- Provide additional information and context around reported emails
- Select email messages for encryption
- Set preferences and destinations for spam and deleted messages

For details, check out the user guide available on Campus.

Summer Blockbuster Alert: New Live Actor Training is Here

Fresh, funny and filled with stars you may recognize, these short-form training vignettes take information security training to A-List levels—all in the time it takes to watch a Hollywood trailer!

UPDATES

Summertime Security Training

Cybercriminals don't take summers off. In fact, when temperatures climb, scammers rise to the occasion, targeting vacationers and other individuals who let their guard down during these low-key, lazy days

To keep employees vigilant and protect your organization, we highly recommend the following training this Summer:

Travel and Out of Office

Tips to keep your guard up while away on vacation or business.

Social Media, Social Engineering

Insights into scammers that prey on those who overshare on social media or take advantage of trusting, unsuspecting individuals.

Public Wifi

Reviews the risks of going online while out and about, including tips to deterring wifi snoopers and shoulder surfers.

These topics are covered in both long-form animated modules (with or without quizzes) or in the abbreviated Click Thinking Express format. Search for them by name in the Content Center.
